needed to be raised, and yet when those industrial savings and loans were created and they were underfunded, and they weren't regulated properly, then the accident occurred, then Commonwealth became insolvent, then we had the problem with State Securities, then we had the problem with American Savings, and all of those depositors were left holding the bag because the Legislature had not taken the proper precautions in enacting the legislation and making sure that the proper safeguards were implemented. This, to me, almost seems analogous to me in the way that it's being handled, because what I see happening is legislation being passed to put us in a compact, no one completely understanding what we're getting into, or all the ramifications of it, no one understanding the liability issues involved, and no one understanding what will happen if some kind of accident will occur, and who will pick up the costs, who will be left with the responsibility of the cleanup, who will be the ones who will suffer and lose if this process continues as it's going. From my view, we should really look at it and say, wait a minute, halt, stop. Are we doing something that we're going to look back 10 or 15 or 20 years from now and say, what in the heck were we thinking of when we passed this legislation, went blindly ahead saying the process could not be reversed, and we end up having a waste site dump located in our state which, at some point in the future, has a leak and has an accident that harms citizens and land around that site, and then we find that that date, that the Legislature, in 1983 and 1984, '85, '86, and in 1990, did not call a halt to the whole process and reexamine where we are headed? That is the question I am offering, and that is the reason I think we all are proceeding blindly, all 49 of us, and a large number of people in our entire...

PRESIDENT: Time.

SENATOR McFARLAND: ...state are proceeding blindly on this process. And years from now our children and our grandchildren may regret this whole waste site dump being located ever in our state and going through with this entire process as it has been going.

PRESIDENT: Thank you. I apologize to you, Senator McFarland, I called you out of order. But we're going back to the list that was on the board before we closed, and that is Senator Rod Johnson next, Senator Landis, Senator Smith, Senator Labeledz. Senator Rod Johnson.
